

“Shakespeare asked, ‘What’s in a name?’ but we should be asking, ‘What IS his name?’” website columnist Dan Niemiec writes. “Recently I have been going through a lot of Cook

County birth and death certificates, and it reminded me that people don’t always carry exactly the same name from birth through to death. For example, Dan’s grandfather was born Domenico Liturri and died Dominick Liture. “What really was his name, and how do I record that name in my genealogy software?” Dan asks. “That’s a philosophical question for the ages on a par with rating the best Chicago hot dog!” For the rest of the story, visit franoi.com/roots.

Italians always seem to find a way to keep their traditions alive, according to website columnist CJ Martello. “When my mom passed away, she took her ‘grustoli’ recipe with her — almost!” he writes. “My wife at that time, the former Marilyn Chao of Roseland’s Tea Garden Chinese Restaurant family, took the time to work with my mother, Angelina, as she baked a batch, and wrote down a complete recipe.” CJ goes on to spotlight a pair of master grustoli makers, Mary Ellen Magnabosco Voras-Craig and Gina Magnabosco, and then offers Mary Ellen’s recipe as a holiday treat.
